

Monthly Operating Report

Lumen Audio, Inc. (fictional) · June 2026 · US parent + Shenzhen operations

The one-minute version. Revenue grew 14% to $182k on early holiday pre-orders, and gross margin held at 47%. You are still burning about $48k a month, so the business is not yet profitable. You have roughly 13 months of runway. The number to watch is cash, not profit: a $58k factory balance is due July 10, which will temporarily pull US cash down before the next wholesale receivable lands.

$611k	12.8 mo	$48.2k	+14%
CASH ON HAND	RUNWAY	NET MONTHLY BURN	REVENUE vs LAST MONTH

Profit & Loss (USD)	June	Cash & Runway	USD
Revenue	$182,400	US account (USD)	$470,000
Cost of goods (Shenzhen)	($96,700)	China account (RMB at 7.18)	$141,000
Gross profit (47% margin)	$85,700	Total cash	$611,000
Payroll & contractors	($71,400)	In-transit inventory	$73,000
Marketing	($38,200)	Net burn (3-mo avg)	($48,200)
Other operating	($18,700)	Implied runway	12.8 months
Net income	($42,600)	FX on RMB this month	+$2,100

Cross-border cash. Cash is split across a US account ($470k) and a Shenzhen RMB account (about $141k at 7.18). The RMB balance is working capital for the factory, not free cash: moving it back to the US takes time and paperwork, so treat it as semi-trapped when you read runway. A stronger RMB this month added about $2,100 of translation gain, which is noise, not earnings. The real event is the $58k balance payment due July 10.

WHAT CHANGED THIS MONTH

- Revenue up 14% on early holiday pre-orders.
- COGS up: ocean freight spiked and the RMB strengthened.
- Marketing ran $6k over budget to fund the pre-order push.

WHAT TO WATCH NEXT

- $58k factory balance due July 10 dips US cash.
- Q3 production deposit ($40k) lands in August.
- Runway is tight enough to start the next raise now.
